IN BRONZE AND MARBLE

HOW AFFECTION KEEPS ALIVE THE MEMORY OF THE DEAD.

Some Notable Monuments Recently Erected to Honor People Celebrated in Widely Different Walks of Life—Gratitude That Reaches Beyond the Grave.

Gratitude has been defined by some maker of smart sayings as meaning "a lively appreciation of favors to come." The definition is neither valuable nor true, for it is not sustained by the weight of testimony. Each day sees evidence to the contrary recorded in the shape of monuments, memorials and tablets celebrating the greatness or virtues of those who have passed from earth. As the dead can neither crown nor dethrone the living, these testimonial to the departed worth must be conceded unhesitatingly to have their origin in no selfish or self seeking spirit.

VICTOR EMANUEL'S STATUE.

The present time is particularly notable for the number and variety of such memorials. Some of the more recent represent the gratitude of nations, the reverence of religionists, the admiration of readers and the affection of a son—as wide a range of creditable human feelings as one could ask to survey.

The people of Italy have honored themselves and appropriately marked the close of the first twenty years of their unity by unveiling at Perugia a magnificent statue of Victor Emmanuel, the gay and gallant Sardinian, who led the way to liberty through fields of bloody strife, and amalgamated many feeble states in one coherent and powerful monarchy. It is undoubtedly true that Cavour was the statesman and guiding power of the stormy epoch preceding the birth of the Italian kingdom, but while his worth and work are recognized, peasant and noble alike find greater pleasure in contemplating the career of their first king, who, "in love or in war," like young Lochinvar, was the first and the best. So they have scattered memorials of him all over the peninsula, but that at Perugia is said to be the finest yet created. It is of bronze, and was designed by Giulio Tadolini, a famous Roman artist.

Within the last few days the state of New Hampshire has erected at Concord a giant statue of a giant son—John Stark, the revolutionary leader and hero of Bennington. Generations of American school boys have read the tale of Stark's life, and thrilled at his alleged remark upon the eve of battle, "We win the light or Molly Stark's a widow." Of late the sticklers for historical accuracy have done away with King Arthur, William Tell, Gessler and other romantic figures, but when they investigated the record of the sturdy son of the Granite state they found that they could not eliminate, they could only modify. It is now established on unimpeachable testimony that Stark's wife was Miss Elizabeth Page, daughter of Capt. Caleb Page,

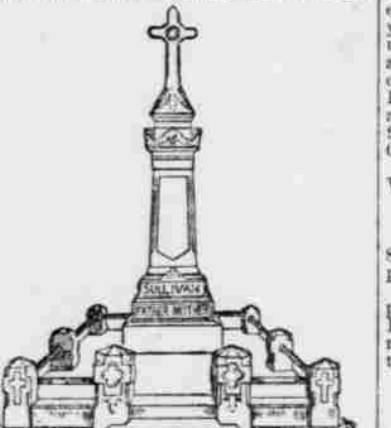

THE BUGHES MEMORIAL.
of Dunbarton, and that when the general "went in" at Bennington he said, "There's the enemy, boys, we must flop them, or Betty Stark sleeps a widow to-night." As every one knows, the warrior was flogged, and the grim old enemy lived many years to "fight his battles over again." Born in 1729, he did not die till 1823. His last years were spent at Manchester, and it was there Daniel Webster saw him in 1812. The two met in a tavern. The veteran was drinking flip with some neighbors when Webster arrived, and he known to question the famous statesman in his usual peremptory manner.

"Who are you, I say?" he demanded.
"My name?"
"Yes, your name. What's your name?"
"My name is Webster."
"Where are you from?"
"From Portsmouth."
"Your name is Webster, and you are from Portsmouth. Where are you going?"
"To Concord."
"To Concord. And where did you come from originally? What Websters do you belong to?"
"I came from Salisbury."
"Oh, ho! from Salisbury. Are you one of the Salisbury Websters?"
"Yes, sir."
"Are you any relation to old Capt. Eb?"
"Slightly, sir; he was my father."
"Are you a son of old Capt. Eb? Let me see you. Why, I declare. Well, I am inclined to think you may be. In the war we could not tell whether Capt. Webster's face was natural color or blackened by powder. You must be his son, for you are a cursed sight blacker than he was."
After life's fitful fever John Stark sleeps well, honored and revered by the state he loved and the republic he helped to create. The memorial at Concord is a fitting tribute to his rugged virtues and undaunted valor.
Peace, the saying goes, has its victories as well as war, and it is in honor of an apostle of peace that a statue is to be erected next spring on the campus of St. John's college, at Fordham, N. Y. It will display the imposing form and kindly features of

IN MEMORY OF MISS CRAIK.
Archbishop Hughes, who was the founder of the college, and who while alive exercised an important influence on the affairs of the Catholic church in the United States. The statue, which is about completed, shows the archbishop attired in his house dress with the addition of a cloak. The eyes are wide open and lips lightly closed. One arm is extended, and the hand of the other holds a small book. The face is said to be an excellent likeness.

The tribute to Dinah Mulock Craik, the noted English novelist, is of a different order. Soon after her death, in 1887, Lord Tennyson, Robert Browning, Matthew Arnold, Sir Frederick Leighton, Sir John Millais, Holman Hunt, John Ruskin, Professor Huxley, James Russell Lowell, Mrs. Oliphant and Miss Yonge set on foot a movement which has just resulted in the erection of a beautiful marble memorial at Tewkesbury Abbey. The monument is a renaissance in style. On a shield is the quotation from "John Halifax, Gentleman": "Each in his place is fulfilling his duty, and passing away, just as that sun is passing. Only we know not whether he passes; while whither we go we know, and the Way we know—the same yesterday, to-day and forever." The following inscription is placed on the frieze: "A tribute to work of noble aim and to a gracious life." Above the cornice is a superstructure, in the center of which is a niche containing a group illustrative of "Charity." and the entire work is surmounted by a cross. But the king, the general, the prelate and the writer are not the only ones to secure monumental recognition of late. In Boston recently died an aged couple. The wife went first, the husband followed a few months afterward. Neither was called to adorn the higher circles of society, and their sole claim to distinction was that they had a son who in his calling had proved invincible. They were proud of this "boy" of theirs, but they would accept none of the wealth he earned. They toiled on to the end in humble independence, and now they sleep side by side beneath the sod, while above them towers a costly monument, the last and unrequited offering of filial affection. The monument bears the simple inscription on its front:

SULLIVAN FATHER—MOTHER.
The opposite side of the shaft displays a plain tablet. Some day, when death has done his work, a chisel will cut thereon the name of the son—John L. Sullivan.

Given Their Annual Bath.
The elephants belonging to the emperor of China are allowed but one bath a year. The annual ceremony took place recently. The emperor commanded the board of astronomy to appoint an auspicious day for the purpose, and they did so after complicated communion with the stars. Then the officers of the board of ceremonies put up temporary nut sheds, beautifully decorated, on the north side of the sacred enclosure where the washing was to take place. Various ceremonies were performed, the bath was taken and in the evening there were illuminations.

WOMAN'S WEAR.
Leather trimming studded with steel or gilt will be worn on winter garments. A ruffle around the bottom of the skirt is the distinguishing feature of all the new gowns.

Two yards and twenty inches is the width allowed for a dress skirt made without a foundation.
The fashionable winter colors are black, heliotrope, silver and iron gray, myrtle green and blue royale.
A useful trousseau consists of a black silk, with a low and a high bodice, a black woolen, a blue serge and a light colored woolen.
Boots for the street, to be in good taste, must be plain black and neat in design. Shoes and slippers for home wear are in fancy shapes and in colors to suit the costume of the wearer.
Feather collars, ticketed "the latest Parisian rage," make very comfortable as well as becoming neckwear, being not so warm as fur and more graceful than anything else imaginable for the same purpose.
Laces are again very fashionable, and will be largely used as garnitures for society dresses during the winter. This refers mostly to Irish laces, which will have the preference in white, Houghton and Limerick.
Street jackets are as fanciful as material and use will permit, and braids are seen in rich profusion. Greenish gray coats will be braided with fawn, pearl gray with lavender, stone color with gold, and dark blue with black.

St. Louis to Colorado via Wichita.
Commencing Sunday, July 13, 1890, the Missouri Pacific railway will run through sleeping cars from St. Louis via Florence, Hill, Rich Hill, Fort Scott and Wichita to Geneseo and from thence to Pueblo, Colorado Springs and Denver. This change has been made on account of a great many people from the east going to Colorado being desirous of going via Wichita. The train will stop here two hours, giving all a chance to view the "Pleasant Hill" still land passengers in Colorado same time as if they had gone via Kansas City. It also gives the citizens of Wichita sleeping car service from St. Louis to Colorado. This change will give us a chance to go east via St. Louis, and sleeping car service. New route just completed between Fort Scott and Rich Hill goes through the finest mineral and agricultural country in the west. Don't forget the shortest line to St. Louis or Colorado.
